Summary

Cutting straight to the chase, I'm a dude who's really enjoying the modern realm of technology.

From a young age, I found myself getting into trouble for disassembling things. However, it didn't stop there. There was always the urge of putting back the pieces or even creating something better than the original.

During the course of my teenage years, my passion for computer systems grew tremendously, and to date, I compel myself to learn something new in this field every day. Aside from technology, I have an equal interest in the world of business. Hence, I am pursuing a career in business information technology at the University of Johannesburg.

Putting aside the geeky stuff, there's much more to me. Just to mention a few, I enjoy playing squash, watching that occasional action-comedy and last but not least, enjoying good humor with some good company.
